FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON, Dec 19 1872

To the Editor of The Oregonian

The two houses of Congress have been occupied during the week with ordinary business of legislation The various appropriations for the ensuing year are being considered in the House and the Senate has gone partly through the regular calendar, considering those bills to which no objection was made the object being to dispose of whatever was on hand that could be acted on without much discussion or loss of time Whenever a bill was called that would provoke discussion some member would object and it would have to pass over When the supplemental civil rights bill in which Sumner is so much interested came up the other day some Senator made objection and it was passed over The objection was that it would be sure to provoke debate and occupy time to the delay of a large amount of other business

In the course of the calendar the bill was called which was introduced by Senator Corbett last session to provide for the payment of certain Oregon war debt claims, being such as were not examined and audited by the Commissioners, Grover Ingalls and Smith, and also some items audited by them which were overlooked or not reported by the Third Auditor This bill provides that such accounts shall be paid upon the same basis or proportion as the claims audited and paid heretofore It seems there are some who oppose this bill as there are always some who oppose payment of any money from the Treasury on such claims So objection was made and the bill had to go over to take its chances hereafter

SOUTHERN OUTRAGES

I noticed on one of the committee rooms the inscription Southern Outrages, and was a little amused that such a committee should still exist in Congress We have heard so much of late of the "pacification" of the once rebel States and have received such returns from the elections there, that it seemed no such committee could be needed Yesterday I was thrown several times in company with a quiet looking gentleman with whom I finally struck up a conversation and he proved to be a Georgia Republican, a man who had served as a rebel Captain of artillery through the war and remained a rebel until 1868, when he became convinced that Southern conservatism was no relyable matter basis of the Government and rebellion kept alive at the elections and in social life when it could not be kept alive in arms So he seceded from the seceders and finally joined the Republicans while his Southern friends continued to be rebels in spirit He says Georgia has easily 15,000 Republican majority, and yet by a preconcerted system of election frauds, which are boldly and openly executed, it is made to give 70 000 Conservative majority, and the judges and officials to whom they would look for redress and justice are the leaders who plan the frauds He seriously assured me that they nursed their prejudices to such an extent that crime was committed from a fancied sense of right. They were determined to ignore the claims of the negroes to civil rights, and they made themselves believe that nothing was criminal they should do for that purpose He informed me also, that only a week or so ago he had been turned out of the Church for no other reason than that they would not have a "radical" roman a church member I confess that when I met a native Georgian of modest mien who told me without pretense or affectation this story, I began to believe there was still some need for committees of Congress to investigate Southern outrages"

OFFICE SEEKERS AND THE WHITE HOUSE

I went into the Presidential Mansion a day or so ago with no definite idea but to see what was going on The great reception room was nearly full Men were buzzing about sending in their cards to the President and the general appearance of things reminded me that Grant had been re elected and the time of the office seekers had come again I didn t see Ulysses There seemed to be enough of the other fellows to answer the demand on his time that day, so I merely took observations of the crowd and the surroundings, and came away The White House is a free thing, you see—a cat may look at a king many a time when a hero subject cannot, but there are certain hours when an American can send in his card to the President of the United States and interview him when his turn comes It is as good as a free lunch I chatted a while with General Dent, the President s brother in law, who receives and entertains the guests at the White House, was remembered by him and answered many of his inquiries about old friends in Oregon, where he was stationed for five or six years when he was a Captain in the army

THE NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD

I have taken some pains to obtain information concerning the intentions of the North Pacific Railroad Company for the coming year as to the construction of their road upon the western slope, and can give very satisfactory confirmation of some reports on that subject as the intelligence comes from a Senator who is a director in the company The present intention is to construct about 300 miles of road 40 in continuation of the Sound route, and 250 eastward from a point near the mouth of Snake river The idea, of course is to use the O S N Co s line to the mouth of Snake river It is hoped to push the work next season to where the road can command the Montana trade, to which you Portlanders will hardly object Indeed I think you will rather like it As to the report that the N P R R Co is negotiating for the purchase of the existing Oregon lines, the rumor has not the least foundation for no such measure has been entertained by the Directors So that rumor has not much force The affairs of the company are pronounced in admirable condition, and there is no reason to doubt its entire success The Presidency of the company has been accepted by General Cass and its prospects are considered in all respects flattering One important consideration for us is this that if 300 miles of railroad shall be built from our end of the line that will require the amount of about 10 000 tonnage to bring out the material and equipments and the vessels coming with it can carry away 10 000 tons of Oregon wheat and flour

POPULAR LECTURES

I heard two distinguished men lecture here during the two weeks past Prof Proctor—the eminent English scientist, whose investigations have resulted in much great discoveries gave a course of six lectures on Light, and his illustrations were with the most perfect known apparatus and I need not say that the results were both interesting and wonderful I felt considerable interest in the man because of his manifested simplicity of manner, and abandonment of self in devotion to his great subject I just thought, that he missed it somewhat in quoting from De Toequeville, that as a Republic we are hardly capable of intellectual scientific and art progress to keep up with the rest of the world His attempt to compliment and rather patronizingly encourage us failed in the presence of an audience whose number, interest and intelligence could scarcely have been excelled by those to whom he has been in the habit of lecturing Still I think he meant entirely well

Washington has most excellent schools and plenty of them and I only half hope hearty evidence to their efficiency by insisting that England has something to learn from us on that score I heard a lady teacher of one of the highest of these describe a visit he made her school when she was hearing a class recite anatomy He became much interested seated himself near the pupil, and placing his elbows on the table he questioned her closely for himself and did not quit until he proved to himself that the class really understood the study At the close of the exercises a young lady came forward and presented him a bouquet He is an old bachelor of over 60 but not the least unequal to the situation He took off his glasses laid them on the table placed his arm around the young lady s neck and repaid her with a kiss and she was not the prettiest girl in the school either Tyndall is too much an enthusiast to be dignified and elaborate in manner, instead he is entirely unaffected, but he lectures with a decided English accent, and with a slight English drawl

Two evenings since I heard the distinguished Scotch writer, George Macdonald, lecture on Burns a literary treat I shall not soon forget He is not in very good health and his lecture had been postponed a week on that account His delivery and manner were peculiar but very pleasant, and the audience, which filled one of the finest Washington churches, was evidently delighted His renderings of various selections from his favorite poet were finely given.

LITERARY CHAT

You are all well acquainted with the distinguishing characteristics of Mr Bronson Alcott's writings, of which probably the most apparent are the shadowings of the author's quiet repose exhibited in every line standing hand in hand with that delicate culture which, when joined with such a companion, is so graceful and affecting His calm serenity seems indigenous, his elegance cultivated of which, therefore he may have often fallen short In his Concord Days he has often sacrificed elegant English to his eagerness to employ none but Saxon idioms and expressions

It is esteemed a worthy rule by which to est mate the merit of a book that if upon reading there is excited in one s mind a spirit of emulation, or a desire to produce something of a like quality of excellence, the production may be considered to have in a certain measure fulfilled the conditions of success Concord Days clearly excites such a feeling in the mind of the reader This delightful work is a collection of essays of which those in the first half of the book are remarkably interesting Of particular excellence are those upon "Self Privacy," "Emerson" and "Scholarship The author understands well the difficult task of interlinearing his "text and talk" with familiar conversation and with outbursts of personal magnetism, "without overstepping the bounds of social or literary decorum" The excellencies, however, exhibited in portions of the work are not sustained throughout The author displays a too eager penchant for recurring to other writers, by the frequency of which he soon wearies the mind of the reader, especially since the relevancy of his quotations to the matter in hand often seems far distant His extracts at length become intolerable from their very extent The essays on "Walden Pond," "Landor," "Selden," and, indeed, the majority in the latter portion of the volume, are almost wholly contributed by those whom we would have had abundant opportunity to read had Mr Alcott never taken the trouble to collect these excerpts into a volume Had he ceased writing at the end of the month of "June," the book would have indeed been a welcome treasure

It seems to be the prevalent idea with Americans that the modern Greeks are a race of lawless barbarians and bandits This impression has gained credence from the want of available information concerning the character, manners of life and social government of that people The Greeks of To Day by Charles H Tuckerman, is calculated to remove in a great measure this impression Having had abundant opportunities during his residence in Athens as Consul to make observations upon the customs, manners and forms of the several classes, he is prepared to present for our consideration a corrected picture of Grecian life, which is for the most part a just one His prejudice in favor of the people is occasionally exhibited, but his statements are generally unbiased, and therefore of the greater significance The book is permeated by a delightful freshness, and contains much of interest and value concerning a subject which is never devoid of attraction His description of Modern Athens and the Parthenon vividly present to our minds the most famous localities in the city According to his representation the Greek Government differs but slightly from ours and that difference is more of form than of reality The people are as a class intelligent, well educated, energetic and pure minded His estimate of the value of foreign missions is somewhat at variance with the views entertained by many of our clergy and though evidently overcharged, possesses much of truth Ample materials are here furnished, though often times meagerly stated, from which to form a very correct idea of the Greeks of to day

It is a difficult task to compel one s self to believe that the Irish people are such a detestable race as Mr Froude would evidently wish us to think That there may be in every nation a predatory class whose only delight is to cause annoying disturbances and commit outrageous acts, is not to be denied But it is to be denied that the historian has a right to describe this class as representing the people with whom he is dealing The distinguished historian in this the first volume of The English in Ireland has displayed great injustice toward the Irish people He says In unmanliness in cowardice in ferocity in a combination of all the qualities most hateful and despicable in man s nature, they have achieved a distinction as yet unmatched He then intimates that England has only erred in being too merciful to her sister island For says he "such races as could neither defend their liberty with the sword nor would submit, when defeated, to live within the bounds of order, have been transported generally to other lands or been steadily decimated till the unruly spirit has been broken." Mr. Froude forgets to consider that the Irish though they be the weaker party have equally with the English an inherent love of country and freedom Yet he finds much to admire in Irish character and fain would see the two countries united in peace harmony His book is marred by those readable qualities which are so manifest in his earlier history but from its one sided tone will hardly admit of being called reliable For this reason the many readers of Mr Froude will likely be displeased with The English in Ireland particularly as his reputation for impartiality is in so much jeopardy at the present moment

Stanley's How I Found Livingstone has just been published by Messrs Scribner, Armstrong & Co It is a book written more in the style of a newspaper correspondent and, hence can not lay claim to any especial literary excellence In fact there are so many grammatical blunders in the book as to render it intolerable were it not for the strange interest in the subject It is a filling up of the story of mishap and adventure of seeking and finding, with the outlines of which we were already familiar Together with the personal experiences of the author, it furnishes us a valuable contribution to our geographical knowledge of Central Africa Mr Stanley has retained in the body of the work much vituperative matter in regard to his controversy with the Royal Geographical Society, and adds a postscript retracting all his offensive remarks It would have been more acceptable had he erased from the main portion of the book all such objectionable passages

The second volume of Mr Forster's Life of Charles Dickens has before us The volume begins with Mr Dickens departure from America, and gives us in detail a picture of his literary labors, his criticisms, his journeyings through Italy and Switzerland, his reception and execution of his various books among them the "Chimes," "Chuzzlewit and "David Copperfield," and most acceptable of all, the glimpses of Dickens' home life Very interesting indeed are the account of Dickens sojourn in Switzerland, and the chapters on "Dombey" and "Splendid strolling" It is reserved for the biographer to tell, in the third and last volume, the painful story of that most delicate part of Mr Dickens life, the relation of which will require so much of tact and discretion

George Macdonald will furnish during the coming year a serial novel for Lippincott s Magazine entitled Malcolm

Messrs Putnam & Sons announce the early forthcoming of a novel by Dr Mayo The book designs chiefly to represent "American Society, and is said to have been twenty years in preparation

Mrs Leonowens, author of The English Governess at the Siamese Court, has in press a new volume entitled The Romance of the Harem, which it is said, will give us an impressive view of the pathos and tragedy that darken the civilization of Siam

We are in receipt of a book that may interest the lawyers—at least until they have found out its true character. It is bound in law sheep, looks well outside and has the name Oregon Reports printed on the upper band of the binding, and "Supreme Court, 3d Wilson" on the lower one. We shall endeavor to measure out to this volume its deserts next week

SOUTHERN OREGON CORRESPONDENCE

ROCK POINT, Jackson Co, Dec 24

To the Editor of the Oregonian

As you are always anxious to obtain news from different localities, and I have a few moments leisure, I take occasion to send you this short correspondence Hon Jesse Applegate, wife and two daughters, arrived here last evening from Link River, in the vicinity of the Modoc Indian troubles They report matters in a very satisfactory condition The Indians on the reservation do not seem as friendly as usual It is hoped, however, that nothing may occur to endanger the lives of any more settlers It occurs to us, in the meantime, that it is a very bad stroke of policy in any commanding officer to leave the reservation to a great extent unprotected, which, if our information is correct, has been done since the commencement of the present troubles I allude now to Fort Klamath where there are 2,500 Indians left with only 14 men I would ask, in case of an outbreak what would become of the settlers of the Rogue River and Klamath country? Would it not be an easy matter for the Indians to burn up and destroy many of these settlements and towns before any relief could be had? What is the true situation to day? This little band, numbering not to exceed 100 warriors bids defiance to some 200 or 300 of our soldiers and volunteers. It is presumed that the principal portion of Capt Jack's band have fortified themselves in the cave and are at the present time inaccessible Consequently they are really masters of the situation There are, at the same time a great many unfriendly Indians roaming over Southeast en Oregon, who have access to all the best of cattle and other articles of food required, which will be supplied by them to those remaining in the cave It is thought by some also that there are certain white men who wish to prolong the war, looking on it as a money making institution by which, if a few hundred men can be allowed to go into winter quarters, they can make considerable money I do not say that this is the case, nor do I accuse any one of such motives, yet there are a great many persons here about who express such ideas More anon ***

An account of the celebration of the anniversary of the independence of the Isthmus of Panama which anniversary was the 28th of November, says

The celebration commenced on the evening of the 27th, and continued till the morning of the 2d inst, during which time all business was interrupted. The harbors of the different steamship companies and of the railroad was much impe

The Transportation Question.

We give our ready assent to the Herald's proposition that water transportation, when that is possible, is much better for the farming community, and therefore better for all classes, than railway transportation, because it is cheaper. But we cannot assent to the further proposition, that "experience is every day proving that railways, as a means of getting the products of the farm to market, are a failure." Railways, as a means of carrying farm produce and all other freights, have proved of incalculable benefit to those sections of country penetrated by them, where water transportation is impossible. There are many districts of considerable extent in the United States that have been brought into communication with the centers of business and trade by means of railways. That such districts are not greatly benefited by the railways, it would seem unreasonable to assert. Any means of transportation that enables the producer to move his commodities at a cost that leaves a margin, however small, over the actual cost of production, is better than no transportation at all. It may be safely stated that an agricultural country that has water transportation to the point of shipment of its produce, possess a great advantage over a country equally distant from the market and equally productive, but which is forced to rely upon the railway as a means of moving its produce. The profits realized by the producer are always in inverse proportion to the cost of transportation; and, of course, the farmer who can avail himself of the cheaper transportation afforded by rivers and canals, is thus enabled to reap larger profits from his year's work than he who is similarly situated in other respects, but lacks this great advantage. It is therefore the correct policy, as our cotemporary suggests, for every section to make the most of its navigable streams, and devote its energies rather to the improvement of the facilities for transportation which nature has furnished, than to the more expensive mode.

The starting point of all correct reasoning on this subject, is the fact that one of the inexorable demands of civilization is the interchang of products of industry. No community can live within itself. The age for that is past. It disappeared with the savage state of life. The Indians who subsist by the chase, the fishery, by digging roots, that have grown indigenously, and who dress themselves in the skins of the animals they slay, can live with little intercourse outside their respective tribes. But civilization can not thrive in such isolation. No one who has not reflected upon the matter has an adequate idea of the part which the carrying business plays in the affairs of all civilized nations. It has been estimated that one-fourth of all the industries of the Christian world are devoted to the carrying of passengers and merchandise from place to place. Cheap transportation, next after fertility of soil and salubrity of climate, is, to the rural populations, the great desideratum of the age. It is the sure key to solve the problem of material prosperity. But, cheap or dear, ample and convenient transportation is a necessity. It stimulates enterprise. Not only by the facilities it affords for moving the products of the land, to market, but by the market it brings to these products, does it urge forward the business of a country. The railway is inferior to the river and canal as a highway by so much as it is more expensive, for every cent added to the cost of necessary transportation is taken from the pocket of the producer. Nevertheless, a policy which would discourage the construction of railways where water transportation is impracticable, is a policy that must end in stagnation and decay.

The country is coming slowly but surely to a sense, first, of the necessity of better carrying facilities everywhere as an instrument of civilization; and, second, of the enormous abuses which are practiced by those who take upon themselves the supplying of this necessity. All manner of extravagant calculations have resulted in all manner of extravagant expenditures, in the construction of roads, where they were not yet needed, which have in turn been followed by every species of extortion and oppression in order to get back some return of the money thus recklessly expended. This, to say nothing of the frauds and stealings of operators in stocks, contracts and land grants, all of which must in every case be ultimately made good by the people, directly or indirectly. The evil is not in making the railways, but in making them instruments of oppression—in securing unguarded legislation in favor of the companies, or legislation closely guarded in their favor and against the people—in polluting the judiciary, corrupting the juries, and tampering with the executive officers—in making the aspirations and ambitions of the men, the social standing of the women, and the bread of the children of the land, a subject of unrighteous traffic—in terrorizing and debauching the entire community from bottom to top. These are the things to be deprecated; and, unless we mistake greatly, they are at the foundation of that growing disposition to watch the conduct of the railway companies with the most jealous scrutiny, and to criticise or condemn in some cases where criticism and condemnation are not merited.

A New York special of the 21st instant said that Orton, the owner of a majority of the Tribune stock, had tendered the position of Editor-in-Chief of that paper to Hon. James G. Blaine, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and that the negotiations with Colfax were Mr. Sinclair's doing. A later dispatch, however, announces the purchase of one-half the entire stock by Whitelaw Reid, which disposes of the chances of everybody else for the editorship in favor of Mr. Reid himself. His editorial, announcing the new proprietorship, contains this as to the future policy of the paper:

"We propose continuing our old battle against injustice and ignorance, under the same Republican banner that Horace Greeley upheld so steadily and so long, and the same policy and candid independence which it was one of his latest acts to reaffirm over his signature in these columns. Naturally, we shall prefer to support, as far as possible, the administration which professes this party name. Such administration will receive from us a frank and candid approval, if its every action be performed in accordance with its principles; but the Tribune is nobody's official advocate. Our party sympathies are not strong enough to overcome our independence, or to muzzle our honest utterances."

Still another dispatch of the same date with this says Reid has retired from the paper. What next.

So far as we have heard there is but one voice among our citizens in reference to the purchase of the two blocks on the levee in the burnt district. The unanimous feeling seems to be that the city should purchase the blocks if there are no legal objections, and throw them open as a public levee.

Mayor Wasserman in his special message to the Council, recommends the prohibition of the building of sheds and wharves across the foot of streets along the river front. This recommendation ought to find favor with the city. The destruction of the entire block on the levee, between Alder and Washington streets, with three brick buildings and several very large stocks of merchandise, by the fire of the 22d inst., was due to the foot of Alder street being roofed over and used by private parties as a place for the storage of wood. had Washington street been in the same condition, it is doubtful whether the fire could possibly have been prevented from crossing that also, and sweeping away other blocks. Let it be understood that a street is a street clear down to the water, and can not be built on except to such an extent as may be necessary for the convenience of the public as a landing place, and not even to that extent without the supervision and direction of the city authorities.

The Brooklyn Daily Union says it is a matter of wonder that a man of Sumner's observation should so utterly mistake the popular sentiment of this country as was evinced by his course during the late campaign. It is still more a matter of astonishment that he should imagine that the people of this country would submit to have erased from the flags of the republic and from the register of the army all inscriptions, momentoes and tokens of the victories of the Union arms in the war of the rebellion. He could not have devised a plan more certain to extinguish what little popularity there may be remaining to him than the resolution to this effect which he recently introduced into the Senate.

Kansas City has become the depot of the great cattle trade of the regions to the west of it. This season, says an exchange: 150,000 head of cattle have reached there by the Kansas Pacific Railroad; 13,000 by the Missouri River, Fort Scott and Gulf Railroad; 18,000 by the Leavenworth, Lawrence and Galveston Railroad, and by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, 21,000—making a total of 152,000 head, with 50,000 head yet to come in. As a consequence of this concentration, Kansas City has become an important point for the slaughtering and packing of cattle. Last year 45,000 head of cattle were slaughtered and packed there, and this year the amount will be larger.

From a Washington dispatch of the 21st instant it appears that the President is in earnest about the suppression of polygamy in Utah. The dispatch says: At Washington it is thought the polygamy problem will soon be settled by the administration. The delegations in the interest of Brigham Young in that city, who recently came from Utah, are working with less hope to avert the coming storm. President Grant has recently expressed a determination to put an end to Mormon institutions. After the holidays the necessary laws will be presented in Congress. Rumors of impending changes among the high officials in Utah are current.

While the matter of protection against a recurrence of the calamity of Black Sunday, is under consideration, would it not be well to extend the fire limits somewhat, and adopt more stringent regulations as to the mode of constructing chimneys and flues? We can call to mind more than one instance of a flue or chimney built in a one or two story structure, extending above the roof the prescribed hight, but terminating very near the eves of another building which is a story higher. The wonder is that these chimneys stand through a single season without setting fire to the neighboring building.

Arnold the "discoverer" of the Arizona (or Colorado) diamond mines, publishes in the Louisville Courier-Journal, a very long letter defending himself against the imputation of having "salted" the diamond field. He protests that so far as he had any knowledge in the premises, the mine was a fair and honest discovery, and says he did not sell to any person till a thorough investigation had been made.

A new line of steamers to ply between Valparaiso and London, called the "Cosmos" line is announced. The first steamer of the line is now on the way out. This is the third line established between Europe and the west coast of South America within six months. These vessels go through the Straits of Magellan.

On the 13th of December acting Governor Pinchback of Louisiana, says a dispatch, made the following appointments: Jacob Hawkins, Judge of the Supreme Court; J. Burk, Clerk of the Supreme Court; John H. Isley, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, in the place of J. H. Kennard, recently appointed by Warmoth.

A Washington special of the same date says:

In response to the telegram of Hon. John McEnory of New Orleans, to the President, asking him to delay the recognition of either Legislature in the city named until the Committee of One Hundred citizens, appointed at a recent mass meeting, can fully represent the whole matter to the Government, the President directed the Attorney-General to forward the following:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 13.

To Hon. John McEnery, New Orleans, La.:

Your visit with a hundred citizens will be unavailing so far as the President is concerned.

His decision is made, and will not be changed, and the sooner it is acquiesced in the sooner good order and peace will be restored.

(Signed) GEO. H. WILLIAMS,
Attorney-General.

SATURDAY MORNING DECEMBER 28, 1872.

CITY.

FIRST STREET IMPROVEMENT.—The storm of the past few days has produced unpleasant results on the embankment at the southern end of the bridge on South First street. A large quantity of the new earth has been washed away, and appearances would indicate that unless some effort is made to guard against the encroachments of the water before spring this bridge will be in a similar condition to what it was last year. The heavy and continuous rains of last winter carried away great quantities of earth which had been thrown in to fill up the gap intervening between the end of the bridge timbers and the solid bank. Portions of the embankment which were not washed away, became thoroughly saturated with water and, yielding to the impulse of gravitation slid down against the timbers supporting the bridge. Hundreds of tons of earth were brought to bear against the "bents" which were either bro[ken] short off, or pushed beyond the perpendicular line. The structure was deemed unsafe and for several months was impassable. The Common Council caused the bridge to be repaired at considerable outlay to the city. From appearances repairs will probably be necessary in a few months. No fault attaches to the contractor or the Council, as the character of the soil and the sudden rise of the waters are circumstances over which no human power can be expected to exercise any control, or very successfully guard against.

QUARTZ MINES.—At the assay office of J H Fish, we were shown yesterday specimens of quartz rock recently taken from the Summit Lode Mine, Eastern Oregon. These mines are situated in the Needle Creek country, Union county, and are owned principally by J. H Packwood. The lode has been definitely prospected for a distance of 2,000 feet and the mine is now ready for active operations. A shaft has been sunk a distance 150 feet, and large quantities of rock have been taken out. About $25,000 have been realized so far from these mines. The rock is quite rich and will average $30 per ton. Mr Packwood proposes to go to California soon and incorporate a company for the purpose of working these mines, and also to place the stock on the market. We learn that only about $50,000 is necessary to purchase all the quartz mills adjacent to the discoveries, and put matters on a permanent basis to work the mines. It is the opinion of experienced observers that these mines will prove of untold wealth and extent. Our Oregon capitalists by allowing these valuable prospects to pass into the hands of California brokers, may have occasion to regret their want of enterprise in the future.

ANNUAL MEETING AND REUNION.—The Taylor street M. E. Sunday School will hold an anniversary meeting on next Monday evening in the audience room of the church. The exercises on this occasion are being prepared with a view to celebrating the 23d anniversary of the organization of the school, which took place in 1850, and a sketch of the history of the school from that date to the present will be given by the Secretary. Addresses from Rev Stephen Burns, of Salem, and others, with singing prepared for the occasion, are some of the exercises promised. After the adjournment the lady teachers of the school will be glad to see their friends and the friends of the school, especially those who were connected with it in past years, in the lecture room, where they will be prepared to furnish refreshments to all who may require them.

BROKE LOOSE.—On Thursday evening about $15,000 worth of logs broke loose from the boom at the saw mill of Smith Bros, in the upper portion of the city, and went down on the current. The bend of the river at that point causes the current to set with great force against the western shore, near which the logs were kept secure by means of chains and logs. The fastenings proved insufficient to withstand the enormous pressure, and the boom parted, leaving the logs to drift at the mercy of the waters. The breakage was not discovered until about 10 o'clock at night. A steamer was dispatched at once to overhaul the logs, but with what success, we have not been apprised as yet. It is estimated that there was about 3,000,000 feet of lumber lost by the parting of the boom.

GROUNDED DOWN.—Capt. Wm Smith was sent several days ago to bring the little steamer Wenat down the Cowlitz river. This steamer was employed early last summer in working in connection with the gangs of men along the line of the North Pacific Railroad. At a good stage of water the Wenat ascended to a point some distance above Pumphrey's landing. She continued to move up the stream as the work along the road progressed. Before the work was completed, the water became so low, that the steamer could not descend, and was tied up for the summer. The late rise enabled Capt Smith to bring her in safety to this city. The Wenat was taken yesterday to the boneyard, where she will be kept for the present.

SCOW DERRICK ESCAPED.—At the time when the logs escaped from the boom at Smith Bros' mill on Thursday night, the large scow which is to be used as a tender to the new dredger, was also carried away. This scow had been finished but a few days, and was lying near the water's edge among the logs, just where it was launched. Early yesterday morning when the fact became known that the scow was gone, Major Robert, Mr. Potter, and several others, started in pursuit on a steamer chartered for the purpose. Fortunately the truant craft was overhauled two miles below the city, and brought back. The scow which was constructed at an expense of several thousand dollars to the government, was found to have escaped all damage.

IN NEW LOCATIONS.—We complete to day the list of those burned out, who have located in new quarters.

G. L. Hibbard, Smith's block, First street, near Ash.

T Blown, at 176, First street

Philip DeSouzer, First street, one door north of Oak

M. Moskowitz, in Cosmopolitan Hotel block.

McCormick has located in Ankeny's new brick, adjoining the Central Market, First street, where he will reopen again with a new stock, as soon as they can be received from New York and San Francisco.

MANY ROBBERS AROUND.—Mr. Versteeg, who lives near the brick yard, in Watson's Addition, neighbor to Mr. Wells, reports an attempt made to chloroform and rob the family of Mr. Wells last night at about 11 o'clock. The chloroform was introduced either at the door or a crack in the wall of the room, after the family were in bed. The volume of chloroform was such as to produce vomiting in the children and nauseate the family. On search the tracks of small booted boots were found around the premises. Mr Wells was supposed to have funds, as he rents three houses

CARBOLIZED HOSE.—On the steamer Oriflamme which arrived from San Francisco. The next steamer will bring 500 additional feet. This hose will be added to the present amount in the hands of the Fire Department, and used whenever circumstances may require. The Common Council instructed the Chief Engineer some time ago to purchase 850 feet of this new kind of hose. Had it arrived prior to the last Sunday, it might have rendered valuable service in that trying crisis.

ALL WORK SUSPENDED.—Two weeks ago the old dredger was ordered to the mouth of the Wallamet by Maj. Robert, on the strength of representations made that gentleman by officers of deep draught vessels. Operations were commenced, but the sudden rise in the rivers not only prevented work but rendered operations by the dredger wholly unnecessary. The dredger was again ordered to the head of Swan Island, where the craft now is. All operations have been suspended for the present.

CONFIRMATORY DEEDS.—Many lot holders on the "Lowndale tract" of the city are availing themselves of the opportunity offered for curing whatever defects there may be in their titles by procuring from the heirs of D H Lowndale confirmatory deeds. It is certainly the part of wisdom to attend to this matter without delay, as all the heirs are here now and may not be together at all times hereafter. Every title obtained from D H Lowndale, unless perfected afterwards, is defective.

GATHERING UP.—The steamers Mary Bell and Marie Wilkins were both busily engaged yesterday in pursuing and gathering up the scattered logs which escaped from the upper mill on Thursday night. Persons from down the river inform us that the steamers had met with very good success in collecting the fugitive logs.

ELECTED.—The semi annual election of officers for Cyrus Lodge, I. O. O. F., East Portland, will be held this evening.

GORGED WITH ICE.—Above the Upper Cascades the Columbia river is reported to be gorged with ice. Unless the weather becomes much colder no serious inconvenience is apprehended on account of the ice below the Cascades. The rise of the waters will probably burst up the drift and the passage over the falls will be roughly pounded to pieces and break up the large cakes of ice so that it will not be able to offer much resistance to the passage of boats up and down.

MORE UP.—Yesterday Police Commissioner Burke became quite apprehensive for the safety of his little sloop the Annie D. and had her moved up to the foot of Oak street, and secured by two large cables. There has been lying for the past two months just below the O. S. N. Co's wharf a position which would be unsafe to risk a small vessel at the present stage of the water when the river is full of drift wood.

BY STAGE.—Passengers who arrive overland from Olympia via Kalama, are compelled to return to "first principles," which means that they must either come by water, stay at home, or take passage on the jolting stage. This state of affairs will be likely to exist, unpleasant as it is, until the slides along the railroad line have been removed, and regular trains are again running.

IN CIRCULATION.—A petition was in circulation yesterday among the merchants and business men of the city asking Congress to make an appropriation of $25,000 for the improvement of the channel of the Yamhill river. The petition received about 500 signatures, including most of the property holders of Portland. In a few days the petition will be forwarded to Washington.

HASSALO LODGE.—The members of Hassalo Lodge No. 15, I. O. O. F., hold their regular semi annual election last evening. The following persons were elected to serve for the term ending June 30th, 1873: Ed. H. Stolte, N. G.; James A. Smith, V. G.; S. Harris, R. S.; E. D. Holcombe, Treasurer; A. G. Walling, P. M.; Wilhamson, and Andrew Hill, Trustees.

TELEGRAPHIC MATTERS.—The telegraph line is reported down beyond Vancouver, toward the north. Yesterday a lot of wire, insulators, etc., were sent from this city over to Vancouver, to repair the prostrated line. The storm committed havoc with the line between Vancouver and Lake river. For a distance of 15 miles only four poles were left standing.

ONEONTA TRIBE NO. 4.—An election was held last evening by Oneonta Tribe No. 4, Improved Order of Red Men, at which the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months: A. B. Hallock, S.; Robt. Bassett, S. S. W. K. Badger, J. S.; O. F. Bell, C. of R.; O. E. Farnsworth, K. of W.; Finance Committee, Messrs. Holmes, Ulter and Leonard.

SERVICES.—On Wednesday—New Year's—the Catholic Church will celebrate the Octave of Christmas, the Feast of the Circumcision. Masses will be said in church at 6, 8 and 11 30 o'clock A. M., the last being High Mass. Vespers and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament will be celebrated at 7 o'clock in the evening.

JURORS DISCHARGED.—Judge Upton yesterday discharged all the jurors from further attendance on the Circuit Court during the present term. ### AMUSEMENTS.

The "Belle of the Faubourg" and "Cousin Joe" served to make an attractive bill at the Oro Fino Theater last evening. A slight improvement was to be noted in the attendance. This afternoon at two o'clock "Masks and Faces," with Miss Donnie as Peg Woffington, will be offered. The ladies will find this an entertaining play, and the audience will no doubt be crowded. To night "Oliver Twist" and "Naval Engagements"—an immense bill. Miss Dunn will appear both afternoon and evening.

GRAND BALL OF THE SEASON.—The ball given last Thursday evening at the new Masonic Hall, under the auspices of the British Benovolent Society, proved a grand social triumph. There were in attendance about fifty couple. Masonic Hall never presented a more handsome appearance, nor was it more neatly and tastefully decorated. The floor was covered with canvass for the accommodation of the dancers. Over the music stand was suspended the English colors, and on the north side of the hall the American flag hung in gathered folds. Around the chandeliers where suspended graceful festoons, and the walls were decorated with floral mottoes. A few yards from the front entrance of the main hall a series of evergreen arches, supported with like pillars, extended across the building. Space and time alike forbid our mentioning in detail all the various styles of dress worn by the ladies on the occasion. But suffice to say that in the requisites of color, fashion and richness of material, the costumes worn by the fair sex surpassed in extravagrance of taste, and magnificence of style any public ball ever given in the city. The gentlemen uniformly wore that most elegant of ball room equipage—black trousers, dress coats of the same hue, white vests and kid gloves. The hall brilliantly illuminated with a flood of light produced a scene of shifting, changing beauty in which were blended the seven colors of the rainbow, and every imaginable shade and tint. It was a rare picture and often looked upon. The eye was not only pleasantly impressed with the successive changes of colors, lights and shadows, but the ear was entranced with the soft strains of music which proceeded from a full orchestra, under the leadership of Mr Chas Bray. The attendance was of the most select character, and constituted the very cream of our best society. Prominent among the gentlemen we observed Gen. E. R. S. Canby, Senator J. H. Mitchell, Hon M. P. Deady, ex Mayor Goldsmith, Major L. Welch, Col David Taggart, S. G. Reed, Esq., Vice British Consul John Wilson, Col. McCraken, Edwin F. Russell, Count Pontfidex and many others who occupy foremost positions in the best society of Portland. The ladies who attended were the wives, sisters and daughters of the most wealthy and influential of our citizens and embraced in a great measure, the beauty, intelligence and social refinement of Portland. Dancing commenced at 10 o'clock, and continued without intermission until 12 30, when a sumptuous collation was served up in the hall to the guests. Supper being concluded, dancing was resumed with zest and continued until the programme was exhausted, when the guests dispersed to their respective homes. The proceeds of the ball—quite substantial—are donated to the Society and are applied in replenishing the treasury of the organization. The ball proved to be the most fashionable affair which has been given in Portland for many years.

A Manual of Health.

An edition of between nine and ten millions of copies of a very useful work is now ready for gratuitous distribution and can be had for the asking at any drug store in the United States, the British Colonies, Spanish America or Brazil. The work referred to is Hostetter's Almanac for 1873. The medical portion of it treats of the various ailments to which the human system is subject, and sets forth the peculiar properties of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—the purest and best tonic at present known—as a preservative of health and strength, and as a remedy for debility and disease. The Almanac is printed in all the principal languages of the civilized world, and reaches a larger number of families and individuals than any other medical treatise that ever issued from the press. No man or woman who has a due regard for their chance of heaven's blessings, bodily vigor, should fail to read the plain, simple and convincing articles which this truly practical publication contains. The miscellaneous matter is varied, instructive and amusing, and the calendar department copious and comprehensive. Hostetter's Almanac is, in short, a book should be convenient adapted to the use of all classes and callings. The farmer, the planter, the miner, the merchant, the mechanic, the laborer, the professional man all need it, and to invalids of both sexes it is literally an article of prime necessity. The medical technicalities which render so many medical treatises intended for popular use unintelligible to the general reader, have been carefully avoided in this pamphlet. All is clear, explicit, forcible and reconcilable with reason and common sense.

The proprietors, Messrs Hostetter & Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa., on receipt of a two cent stamp, will forward a copy by mail to any person who cannot procure one in his neighborhood.

Sierras, Adios.

BY JOAQUIN MILLER

With the buckler and sword into battle
I moved, I was matchless and strong;
I stood in the rush and the rattle
Of shot and the spirit of song
Was upon me, lyonthful and splendid
My armor dashed far in the sun
And I sang of my land — It is ended,
And all has been done and undone

I descend with my dead in the trenches,
To-night I bend down on the plain
In the dark and a mangled wreathes
The soul I turn up to the rain
The cold and the beautiful faces—
Aye, faces forbidden for years
Turned up to my face with the traces
Of blood to the white rain of tears.

Count backward the years on your fingers
While forward rides yonder white moon,
Till the soul turns sable and it lingers
By a grave that was born of a June—
By the grave of a soul, where the grasses
Are tangled as witch-woven hair,
And where footprints are not and where pass
Not anything known anywhere

By a grave without tombstone or token,
At a tomb where not form-leaf or fir
Root or branch was once bended or broken
To bestow there the body of her;
For it lives and the soul perishes only,
And alone in that land with these hands
Did I lay the dead soul, and all lonely
Does it lie to this day in the sands.

Lo! a wild little maiden with tresses
Of gold on the wind of the hills
Aye, a wise little maiden that guesses
Some good in the cruelest ill;
And a babe with his baby fists doubled
And thrust to my beard and within,
As he laughs like a fountain half troubled,
When my fingers chuck under his chin.

Should the dead not decay when the culture
Of flesh is resumed in the May?
Lo! the eagles are dark-winged as the vulture,
Let them swoop, then, and bear them away.
By the walks let me cherish red flowers,
By the wall teach, ivy to run,
Lest I wake and I watch all the hours
I shall ever see under the sun.

It is well, maybeso, to bear losses,
And to bend and bow down to the rod,
If the scarlet red bars and the crosses
Be but rounds up the ladder to God
But this mocking of men! Ah! that colors
The marrow, this howling of Hell
Intertwines for my song love that centers,
Yes! land, upon thee, is not well

And I go, thanking God in my going
That an ocean flows stormy and deep;
And yet gentler to me is its flowing
Than the storms that forbid me to sleep;
And I go, thanking God with hands lifted,
That a land lies beyond, where the free
And the giant of heart and the gifted
Of soul have a home in the sea.

The New Northwest.

The above heading has no reference to the excellent journal called the New Northwest, the weekly visits of which are waited for by many readers with such impatience, as arises out of a high appreciation of its worth; but to that great northwest that is just coming prominently into notice through the construction of the Northern Pacific Railway. The world has very indefinite notions of that region. In a series of letters to the Portland Standard and Journal, Lieut. Cogswell, gives both the good and bad of the country through which the eastern division of the road passes. Whatever else may be thought of that district it will impress every one strongly with the idea of vastness—extent—breadth—as well as with some other ideas that have no very decided charms for Oregonians, as these extracts will prove:

"The "copper region" is a distinct feature of the ore or mineral lands of the northern or upper peninsula of Michigan. The principal shipping points are Eagle Harbor, Portage Lake—sometimes called Houghton and Handcock, and Ontonagon. Solid masses of copper are often found, weighing from four to six tons.

From Duluth we took the cars to the junction, twenty-eight miles distant on the line of the N. P. R. R., where we met some Odd Fellow brothers who gave us an account of the serious trouble formerly existing in that section, by reason of the gamblers who largely gathered there. Several were shot dead, while the remainder received a copy of the following hint to "travel," embellished with cuts of coffins:

CARLTON CO., MINN.

Mr.

You are hereby notified to leave within twenty-four hours from date of this notice or remain at your peril. VIGILANTE.

From this junction a branch of the Lake Superior and Mississippi division of the Northern Pacific railroad runs to St. Paul, 155 miles. Some of the finest waterfalls—called Dalles of the St. Louis river—in the world, are to be seen on the left of the railroad in passing up from Duluth.

From the junction we passed on to Brainerd, 97 miles, where we stopped for dinner. Just beyond the town, which is situated within a forest of scrub pines, flows the Mississippi river, which crossing by the cars, we passed on to Detroit Lake, 90 miles, Hawley, 30 miles farther, Glyndon, 12 miles beyond, to Morehead, 10 miles farther, where flows the Red River of the North which is the dividing line between Minnesota and the land of the Dakotas. The country looks well even 177 miles into Dakota.

From Brainerd to the Red River, 130 miles, the country is on a higher elevation than near Duluth. About ten rods from the station of Brainerd the track passes over the Mississippi river. All along the railroad may be seen the habitations of the settlers—Indians, half breeds, Swedes, Norwegians, Danes, &c. Arriving at Detroit Lake, about 60 miles from Brainerd, the country is found to be undulating; very pleasantly so. From that point to Hawley, 30 miles, the surface assumes a level appearance, while from Hawley on to Glyndon, 12 miles farther, on to Morehead and the Red River, 28 miles, the country is one vast prairie, with scarce the sight of a tree or shrub. This description applies to Dakota as well, as far as we visited, to the Missouri river.

STONES FOR THE STANDISH MONUMENT.—The quarries of Rockport, Hallowell and Quincy have each contributed largely for the Standish Monument, while some of the stones have been sent from Vermont and New Hampshire. About three-quarters of the whole amount of stone required is on the ground, and a large portion has been hauled up Captain's Hill, ready for laying, by ox-teams, kept for the purpose. Some of the owners of large stone stores destroyed by the late fire have contributed blocks from the ruins, showing the effects of heat upon the same, which, with an inserted tablet, are to be placed in the inner wall, conspicuous to view in ascending the winding stairs. About three tons of stone have also been contributed from the ancient ruins in Egypt, which are also to be placed conspicuously on the inner wall. The centre cone of the monument, around which there is to be a special staircase, is to be of brick, resting upon arches sustained by eight round granite pillars of twelve feet in length. These pillars are finely cut, and as there is an open space around them, on entering the door, of some twenty-two feet in diameter, the appearance and effect are very fine. They were presented by a member of the association, as were the stones from Franklin street and the Egyptian ruins. The work on the monument will be started again early in the spring, so as to secure its completion 110 feet in height next season. The weather this fall has been very favorable for working upon the monument, and a solid mass of stone has been laid equaled in this country only by that at Bunker Hill. The structure so far is very massive, and many of the first tier of stone above the foundation averaged something like four and one-half tons each.—Boston Traveller Dec. 12.

A special of December 13th says: There is information in trustworthy Democratic sources to the effect that the acceptance of the compromise by the Alabama dual Legislature will result in giving the Republicans a working majority of five or six. It is believed in the same quarters that another result will be the election to the United States Senate of some Republican other than Spencer. In view of the fact that the acceptance of this compromise involves the practical recognition of the illegality of both existing quasi Legislatures, the action of Senator Spencer in presenting his credentials to-day to the Senate for another term is considered somewhat hasty.

The river had risen twelve feet at Albany on Thursday night, and was out of its banks.

OREGON.

It is reported that the woolen mills at Oregon City are soon to be rebuilt.

The mails from Portland for Salem on Wednesday, went by the way of Roseburg, and arrived at their destination on Thursday.

The Enterprise says. "It costs 18 cents per bushel to get wheat from Harrisburg to Portland, a distance of 100 miles. When the locks are open and competition on the river, it will be carried for half that price, and the farmers will get the difference

That was an imaginative preacher at the revival at Jefferson who, in describing our Savior's death and burial to his congregation, said that his tomb was guarded by three Roman angels armed with improved Springfield rifles and glittering bayonets!

A correspondent at St. Joe, under date of the 26th, writes us that the surface of the country is covered with water. The Yamhill river is rising rapidly, and the bridge across it at that place was considered to be in great danger of being carried away by the flood.

Dr Barclay, of Oregon City, reached his 64th birthday on last Wednesday, Christmas day, and on the occasion was presented by his friends, with a magnificent gold headed cane. His wife was the recipient of a beautifully bound copy of the Holy Bible, at the same time.

At the last regular meeting of Rebecca Lodge No. 2, I. O. O. F of Oregon City, held last Tuesday evening, the following persons were elected as officers for the ensuing term A. J. Apperson, N. G., Mrs. L. Diller, V. G; Mrs M. C. Athey, S, Mrs. J. Wortman, T; Mrs. W. H Pope, P. S.

The following named gentlemen were elected to fill their respective chairs in Albany Lodge No 4, I. O. O. F., for the new term commencing January 5th, 1873: Coll. Van Cleve, N. G., N. Baum, V. G.; C. W. Shaw, S.; C. Keifer, T, Bros. J. F. Bankenste, Fred Garf and C. W. Shaw, Trustees.

At the last session of Multnomah Lodge No 1. A. F. & A. M., held last Saturday evening, at Oregon City the following gentlemen were elected officers for the ensuing term: John Myers, W. M; J. W. McCully, S. W, G. W. Ganong, J. W; Dr. Forbes Barclay, Treasurer; J. T. Apperson, Secretary, C. McCue, Tyler.

Jacob Bales writes from Linkville to the Democrat, under date of December 19, that the settlers of Link river and adjacent valleys are all fortified against the Modoc Indians, who are still infesting the surrounding mountains and breathing out threats against the white settlers. The red devils have already slain sixteen of the Link river inhabitants.

The Albany Register says: The storm of Monday night was the severest of the winter. The rain fell in torrents, while the zephyrs held high carnival, making strong buildings to tremble with its might, and scattering signs and flag poles hither and yon. The weathercock on the Court House was blown down, as also the flag staff over the City Hall. The storm raged nearly all night.

Thos. Nelson, of Yamhill county, succeeded in capturing the man Russell, who is accused of having set fire to Williamson's mill in that county some two weeks ago. Russell was making his way out of the State and was near the line when caught. It is said that he denies having fired the mill, and that another man, who is also under arrest did it, while he (Russell) drove home with the wheat and flour which had been stolen. Mr. Nelson manifested considerable skill as a detective in effecting the capture.

A correspondent from Linkville relates a sad episode of the Modoc Indian butchery of the settlers. He states that one of the victims of the bloody carnage was Richard Cravigan, who was killed on the Boddy place. He had been married but a few weeks. He was shot down in the presence of his young wife, who was told to make the best of her way to Linkville or she would be treated in the same way. The poor young woman, who is not over fifteen years old, by the way, fled to the woods and that night traveled eight miles to the mouth of Lost river, where she was rescued by a party sent out to look for bodies.

The following description of the statue of Lincoln is taken from a letter to the Portland Standard and Journal, from W. F. Cogswell, reporter of the U. S. Senate:

First of all, we visited the Fairmount Waterworks, and saw the statue of our lamented Lincoln. This memorial in bronze is mounted on a huge and lofty block of granite, facing to the east, and represents Mr. Lincoln seated, holding in his right hand the emancipation proclamation, guarded at the base by dragons of war with flaming wings. On the east side, cut into the granite base, reads, "To Abraham Lincoln, by a grateful people." On the west, "Let us here highly resolve that the Government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth." North side, "I do ordain and declare that all persons held as slaves within the States in rebellion, are, and henceforth shall be, free." South side, "With malice toward none, with charity toward all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us finish the work we are in."

Mr. Sumner's Oblivion Bill.

A Boston letter dated December 13th has this in regard to the resolution introduced into the Massachusetts Legislature condemning Mr. Sumner's oblivion bill:

The Committee on Federal Relations held a meeting to-day to consider the resolutions introduced, on leave, in the House on Thursday by Mr. Hoyt, of Athol, condemning the course of Senator Sumner in presenting a bill in the United States Senate for the erasure of the names of battles with fellow-citizens from the army register and regimental colors. Mr. Hoyt appeared in behalf of his resolution, and presented Mr Sumner's bill, which was introduced in the National Senate Dec. 2, and which was laid upon the table and was now pending in some form. If the principle was right it would be a shame to keep the names on the flags in the State-house. The proposition was to reduce the Union to the level of the Confederate soldier. Mr. Sumner was elected by the Legislature, and this resolve was the only means the people had of expressing their repudiation of the atrocious proposation. He offered it in no partisan spirit, but as a citizen and an old soldier, and thought that the Legislature would do itself credit in the passage of the resolution. Mr. Nutt, of Natick, followed in advocacy of the resolution. Mr. Porter, of Revere, concurred in the resolution, and had been asked to present a similar resolution himself. In reply to Mr. Thompson, of Gloucester, who asked whether the brave men of the South would not enlist in the army if their names were erased from the flag, Mr. Porter said that the men who really did the fighting on each side were good friends. It was only when the Union soldiers came into the hands of the Home Guards at Andersonville and elsewhere that they were maltreated. Mr. Richardson, of the Committee, said the language of the resolution was not strong enough to express his personal feeling; but when they were framing the voice of the people of Massachusetts they should be careful and dignified in the choice of words

The subjoined item is from the Louisville Courier-Journal:

The diamond frauds which have engaged the wires of the Associated Press from the Pacific coast for several days have at last culminated in one of the largest civil suits that was ever brought in the Hardin Circuit Court. Quite a sensation was created on our streets this morning, when it was noised around that the safe at his residence and the valuables of Philip Arnold, in the bank of Thomas Polk & Co., bankers at this place, had been attached by the Sheriff. To see the property of a reputed millionaire attached by an officer of the law was enough to create a sensation, and it did it to perfection. At the Clerk's office of Hardin Circuit Court is a long petition, in which one William M. Lent of San Francisco desires equity to return to him $350,000 from Philip Arnold, John Slack and others, which he claims was obtained from him fraudulently.

A Berlin dispatch of the 22d has this:

Spencer's Gazette explains that the partial revocation of reduced fares for emigrants on the state and private railways in Germany, is a question of international administration required of the Government by considerations of political economy and of the private companies by their own interests. The American press had greatly exaggerated its importance, and distorted the signification of this trifling affair. The Gazette calls on the press of the United States to do all in their power to bring to a satisfactory conclusion the negotiations for an emigration treaty which America, and not Germany, has delayed for years.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

Financial.

FRIDAY EVENING, Dec. 27, 1872.

Gold in New York to-day, 112¼.

Portland Legal Tender rates, 88½ buying; 89½ selling.

Wheat in Liverpool—Average, 12s 2d@12s 6d; Club, 12s 9d@13s.

The report of the Director of the United States Mint at Philadelphia for the year ending June 30, 1872, gives the deposits of bullion during the year at $40,417,468 84; and the total value of the coinage at $40,737,637 10; the total number of pieces struck being 14,823,277 The number of base coins redeemed was 25,643;572, with a valuation of $476,852 31. The chlorine processes will, in the opinion of the Director, supercede all others

The New York money market had not experienced any malleration at the date of last mail advices. Rates were 7 per cent. gold; with an added premium of ½-32 to 1 16 per cent. per day The demand for currency at the South and West to move the cotton and hog crops was urgent, and much money was flowing out while but little was returning from interior points. Advices from England were not important.

We learn of no important movement in our home financial circles. The banks maintain their regular rates of discount on good paper, while outside transactions vary with the particular circumstances of each case. The year being now about to close our business men especially merchants are generally preparing to close up their accounts and arrive at something like a correct estimate of the state of their affairs. While in many instances this proceeding will disclose a condition not altogether cheerful yet we feel confident that our people as a class are richer and our prospects better than they were one year ago. We are indebted for the favorable condition in business matters during the past year to the fact that a commendable prudence has as a general rule, been observed by our people and in the stringency prevailing in monetary matters the circulating capital of our State has been confined to the legitimate channels of trade We have been spared from the serious effects produced elsewhere by the mania for speculations of a wild and uncertain character. So that although large profits have not been the experience of many, the general condition of trade in our midst is one of permanence and our expectations for the future are not clouded by any doubts as to the position we are bound to take among the commercial communities of the Pacific coast.

The close of the year brings to our mind the fact that

The Credit System,

upon which a great deal of the business here is done, is one which, although in some respects it does not properly belong to our commercial department, is nevertheless a proper subject of inquiry at the present time. While credit properly employed is sometimes desirable, it is in some respects materially misapplied with much resulting loss. For instance, suppose that a retail merchant has twenty customers who keep accounts with him and that he knows from experience and observation that, at least, one of them does not design to pay the bill which he runs up another from bad management or misfortune will, in all probability, be unable to pay the final balance of his account; while others will be very slow pay. He will also be obliged to give considerable time and labor to the keeping of accounts, and efforts to collect bills. On the whole, he is likely to lose the amount of sales which he makes to two of the twenty. But he does not know from which two his loss will come So to the price at which he could afford to sell his goods for cash down, he adds enough to cover losses, and interest on delayed payments, enough to enable him to make the same profit with twenty credit customers that he could with eighteen cash buyers at reduced or cash prices. Thus he obliges each man to help insure the debts (including interest) of all the others This is a sample of thousands of cases the country through; and no insurance is probably so costly as this mode of insuring debts, which is ten per cent or thereabouts This a fresh illustration of the expensiveness of dishonesty, as more than half the premium grows from the risk of non payment or improper delay But the whole system is faulty and harmful Probably the majority of the twenty could, by prudence, foresight and temporary retrenchment, manage to pay cash down, and when the habit was once established, they would find goods ten to twenty per cent cheaper than under the old plan. The mischief of the latter goes farther than the retail store. The retailer—in consequence of giving credit—often cannot pay cash for his purchases from the wholesale dealer, so he must either give up his trade to others, at least for a time, or buy at three, four or six months' credit This necessitates inquiry into his standing, resources, etc., and the wholesale merchant must include in like premium of insurance on his sales to the retail dealer, which the latter necessarily includes in his prices. If it is unavoidable to ask for credit, the best way in a majority of cases would be for the purchaser to borrow money on whatever security he can give, and pay cash for the goods

Co-operation of Producers.

We notice in some of our Valley exchanges that the farmers are calling meetings in some localities, and taking steps for forming associations for their mutual protection against what is claimed to be oppression on the part of produce buyers and shippers. This step is doubtless the best way to remedy such an evil, if it exists. Says an exchange, that which is to prove the ultimate solution of the contest between the producer and the capitalist in all the varying phases of their relations, is co-operation. It is in co-operation that skilled labor must eventually find the remedy for the present unequal apportionment of the shares of the product which go respectively to capital and labor. And it is in co-operation—organization of the oppressed interest—that producers must finally seek the equitable adjustment of those intermittable quarrels with the merchant who buys and the corporations which transport their products Combination is not so easy for the many who produce as for the few who buy and carry; but it is still practicable, and even though the first attempts to carry it into execution may prove temporary failures, they can not fail to prove the stepping stones to final success

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT.—To show how uncertain our buyers of wheat are, in regard to the market of this crop we note the fact that two of them made a wager in our presence on the product advancing to being higher or lower before harvest than it is at present, one who is well posted as to commercial matters, maintaining that it had about reached the maximum for the season and the other having got up an equal knowledge of the subject claimed that the probabilities were in favor of a further rise. Thus our readers will see that it is impossible for those who are in the market very day or two, to agree as to whether prices will rise or fall, much less the extent of future fluctuations. In the all essence of advices of an important nature we note no material change in our quotations of yesterday which range at $1 55@1 60 per cental

OATS.—We have a dull market to report to-day The steamer to sail for San Francisco to-morrow will carry away a considerable quantity, but will not probably take a full ship. The California market is quoted firm and prices steadily maintained. Ours ranges from 68 to 70 cents per bushel.

FLOUR.—Pretty fair supplies are on hand and former quotations hold good. The demand is moderately active

FEED.—The demand is more active and owing to some reduction in receipts, prices are still. We quote bran at $15 per ton. Shorts and middlings at same as $20.

POTATOES.—The market is well stocked and rates dull at our former quotations

POULTRY.—There has been good supply in the market and considering the season transactions are dull Good hens are quotable firm at $4 25 per dozen, mixed at $3 50@$4 Turkeys $16@20 and geese dull at $9@10.

BUTTER.—We note no change in the market which is dull in common, while choice fresh dairy is fairly active

EGGS.—There is a fair supply kept up by increased receipts while the demand is good Prices, which are about 40@42½ cents per dozen, are dull.

APPLES.—The market is barren of change. The supply is but large and inquiry is not extensive.

A SPECIALTY,

And is now prepared to treat patients for those diseases not being fortunate enough to have treated a great many eminent and distinguished persons, whose names are most cheerfully emblazoned to the world by advertising physicians; but at the same time I can produce numerous and voluntary testimonials from those I have treated for the above diseases!

It is well enough known throughout California that I am the possessor of a secret to prepare a medicine, purely vegetable, for the above diseases, and have made same of the

A Card to the Public.

Having learned that Dr. H. RESSER has located himself in Portland, I deem it my duty to the public, and more particularly those persons who may be afflicted as I have been. After having Portland, a few months ago, I became afflicted with Epileptic Fits, and after having tried and consulted several distinguished physicians, without any benefit whatever, I was advised to call on Dr. H. RESSER, who happened to be visiting Virginia City at the time on professional business. I took no time in placing myself under the care of DR. RESSER, and am now restored to perfect health. I can most highly recommend DR. RESSER to those who may be equally afflicted. FREDERICK FORNER.

Other Testimony.

MR EDITOR: I saw in your last issue of the Press a card written by Mr. Robinson, and I deem it my duty able to make a similar statement, for the benefit of those who are troubled with disease of the lungs. Three years ago I commenced under the treatment of some of the most skillful physicians of the Atlantic States, who pronounced my case Bronchial Consumption. After trying with them about two years, with but little benefit, I was advised a change of climate, which I made, and came to Santa Barbara about a year ago, with the hopes of a speedy recovery, but could not see that the change had been what I anticipated, until a month since I commenced under the treatment of Dr. RESSER, and have improved in health very much in that time, and am confident in a short time I will be restored to perfect health under his treatment. I cordially recommend DR. RESSER to the public MRS. M. L. REYNOLDS.

Card.

SR. CHARLES HOTEL,

SANTA BARBARA, CAL, May 25, 1871.

I consider it my duty to the public to make the following statement, hoping that some unfortunate invalid may be benefitted by it. Having been sick for some time with lung disease (or consumption) I applied to many physicians in San Francisco and other places, under whose treatment I found no relief. A short time since I met Dr Resser here in Santa Barbara, and knowing of some of the wonderful cures he has made in different parts of the State, I put myself under his treatment, and commenced to improve immediately. I can warmly recommend Dr. Resser to all who are afflicted with this dreadful disease, and he makes the lung and liver disease his specialty

ELIJAH ROBINSON,

Card.

It is well known here that I have been under the doctors' care for the last twelve months in San Francisco and here, but could receive no benefit from any one When Dr. Resser arrived here, a short time ago, I put myself under his treatment, and commenced to improve immediately, and I am confident that in a short time I shall be restored to my health again. I can highly recommend Dr. Resser to the public.

Card.

To remove all doubt from the public mind in relation to a question which has created some dispute in San Jose, I feel it my duty to make the following public statement of facts. It is well known that my wife was very low with consumption—so low, in fact, that I had given up all hope of her recovery I called on Dr H RESSER, who makes consumption his specialty, and in two weeks time my wife's health had so improved that she was able to walk out, and for the last three weeks has been on a visit to San Francisco, and is growing stronger every day I can recommend DR RESSER to all who are afflicted with diseases of the lungs.
